

France had the man, but gave him those
Whom he had taken for her by the nose;
England had her's, and has him still,
Who'll cut her own throat for her, if she will

EPIGRAMS ON LORD CASTLEREAGH.¹

Oh, CASTLEREAGH! thou art a patriot now;
Cato² died for his country, so did'st thou;
He perish'd rather than see Rome enslav'd,³
Thou cut'st thy throat, that Britain may be sav'd.⁴

So CASTLEREAGH has cut his throat!—The worst
Of this is,—that his own was not the first.

So He has cut his throat at last!—He! Who?
The man who cut his country's long ago.

EDITORIAL NOTES

² Marcus Porcius Cato Uticensis, or Cato the Younger (95 BC-46 BC), conservative senator during the late Roman Republic.

³ After the defeat of the forces loyal to the Roman Senate at the Battle of Thapsus (46 BCE), Cato refused to surrender to Caesar and to live under a regime he considered illegitimate; he chose death as the ultimate act of defiance and resistance. His suicide was a deliberate political statement, and turned him into a martyr.

⁴ Robert Stewart, Lord Castlereagh, took his own life in 1822, exacerbated by intense political pressure.
